SEATWORK NO. 6.1 INVENTORY SYSTEM

1. PROCEDURE OUTPUT

acttivity.cpp Inventory.txt

acttivity.cpp > main()

```cpp
#include <iostream>
#include <fstream>
#include <string>

using namespace std;

struct Product {
    string name;
    int qty;
    double price;

int main () {
    Product product;

    ofstream out("Inventory.txt");

    out << "Mouse 10 250\n";
    out << "Keyboard 5 500\n";
    out << "Monitor 3 4500\n";

    out.close();
    //Append
    out.open ("inventory.txt", ios::app);

    cout << "Enter name, qty, and price: ";
    cin >> product.name >> product.qty >> product.price;

    out << product.name << " "
        << product.qty << " "
        << product.price << "\n";

    out.close();

    ifstream in("inventory.txt");

    double total = 0;

    cout << "\nINVETORY LIST\n";

    while(in >> product.name >> product.qty >> product.price) {
        double value = product.qty * product.price;

The program creates an inventory file, adds a new product entered by the user, displays all stored product, and calculates the total inventory value by multiplying each quantity by the price of each product, then adding all the values together. The new product is added to the file using the append mode.
